Secretary Rogers had come before the committee to testify on the administration's foreign ald hudget requests, but Sen. Ful-bright immediately turned the questioning to the latest raids against North Vietnam.

During the lengthy session, another committee member, Sen. Frank Church, D., Idaho, said that heavy U.S. bombing did not stop the Communists during the Johnson administration. He asked why Mr. Rogers thought it would do so this time.

The secretary replied that Hanoi's 12 or 13 divisions operating in South Vietnam depended on fuel and other supplies stockpiled in the North. He said U.S. bombing of these caches could help turn back the enemy drives. "If these offersives are unsuccessful, and these combat divi-sions... are defeated, then the likelihood of new and major invasions by the North Vletnamese is going to be greatly diminished," Mr. Rogers said. The secretary declared: "We're going to see that this major offenzive attack does not succeed." President Nixon met late to-day with Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird and Adm. Thomas Moorer, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Mr. Laird is to testify tomorrow before the Foreign Relations Committee. In congressional comment, the Senate's assistant Democratic leader, Sen. Robert C. Byrd, W. Va. said he hoped the hombing would stop soon and the U.S. would return to prace talks. Sen, Byrd said that while he was sorry the air attacks took place. North Vietnam had crossed the Demilitarized Zone with ground forces.

The assistant Senate Re-publican leader. Sen. Robert Griffin Mich., defended the boothing, saying "I don't see any reason targets in Hanoi and Haiphong should be immune." Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D.,

Mass. called the air raids "senseless." Sen. Alan Cranston, D., Calif., said that although President Nixon had withdrawn ground troops, the number of naval and air forces in Indochina had increased. "After three years of Richard Nixon, is Lyndon Johnson back in the White House?" he asked. Sen, George Aiken, R., Vt., supported the bombing. He said he had been passionately against the war since 1986, because he "thought the United States was clearly the aggressor. "Now they are the aggressors and I am satisfied they are going to lose," Sen. Aiken said. He predicted a bloodbath if North Vietnam won, and said "I would not want to stand by and see two million people butchered."

The command's announcement said the raids had been directed against "military targets in the vicinity of Haiphong." According to informed officers, before the B-52s came in, fighter bombers "softened up" the area. Whether strikes were made on airfields as well as on petroleum storage facilities, truck parks, warehouses and other facilities was not disclosed. A principal reason for the relatively light aircraft losses in the successful visit to Peking showed raids, officers said, was the element of surprise.

"The North Vietnamese never expected to be hit north of the 20th Parallel," one official said, because it had been limited way back in 1968."

The command itself gave the North Vietnamese every reason to believe they did not run the risk of being attacked in Hanoi and Haiphong, the principal entry port for military supplies from the Soviet Union and other coun-

Earlier Raids Limited

Earlier retaliatory actions against North Vietnam's offensive across the Demilitarized Zone were limited to the southern part of North Vietnam and were designed to hring more direct tacti-cal military benefits to South Vietnamese forces. The South Vietnamese are battling 15,000 to 20,000 well-equip-ped North Vietnamese soldiers just below the zone straddling tha border hetween the two Vietnams.

According to U.S. intelligence sources, the North Vietnamese prepared for their attacks on tha South hy installing SAM-2 Soviethuilt missiles at 18 sites, most of them just north of the Demilitarized Zone. The number represented an increase of nine in the last year. Each site has four to five missile launchers.

The number of SAM sites north of the 20th Parallel—all concentrated around Hanoi and Haiphong—has remained constant at 12 over the last year, according to intelligence reports. It was these 12 sites that fired the 200 missiles.

Better After Practice

"They must have been pretty rusty," ona officer said. "Those guys in the south are much better -they get more practice."

It was on intelligence information that the Hanoi and Haiphong air defenses would be relatively easy to penetrate that the bombing operation was selected from a file of contingency plans that Gen. Creighton W. Abrams's headquarters in Saigon has had since the bombing halt of 1968. The plan was modified in Washington by the Joint Chiefs of Staff and passed on to the White House for President Nixon's approval, according to officers here, The command said that these strikes "will help reduce the

Apollo-16 Scientific Mission

Scanning the Heavens From Airless Moon

By Walter Sullivan

NEW YORK, April 17 (NYT). -Ever since the dawn of the space age scientists have extolled the advantages of scanning the heavens from the moon, free of the earth's smog and obstructing atmosphere, and on the Apollo-16 mission the first such observations will be made.

They will be of special im-portance, for they are of a type that not only is impossible from the earth but could not be conducted from a space station orbiting near the earth.

This is because the observations of the earth, distant stars and galaxies and the lunar horizonwill be at ultraviolet wavelengths. The earth is enveloped in a gigantic cloud of hydrogen whose ultraviolet glow makes such ob-servations impossible within a radius of 50,000 miles,

While many of the other scientific efforts on this mission will be similar to those carried out on earlier flights to the moon, several will be new. One involves bringing back to the moon a small rock collected on the lunar surface by the Apollo-12 astro-

Intense Magnetism

The purpose is to seek an explanation for the unexpectedly intense magnetism found in some of the lunar samples after they reached laboratories on earth, This magnetism is of the "soft" variety that can be "washed" from the sample by subjecting it to rapidly alternating magnetic fields. What then remains is a residne of "hard" magnetism frozen into the rock when it formed from the hot, molten

The soft component could have been imported to the sample by prolonged exposure to a magnetic field, such as that which controls s compass needle on earth. But to produce the magnetism found in the lunar samples, a magnetic field 20 to 100 times stronger than that on the earth's surface beheen ed bluow

One possibility is that the samples in some way became magnetized through handling or during their transport to earth and the laboratory. Hence the Apollo-12 sample, now scrubbed

Another new type of observa-tion is aimed at the cosmic rays raining on the solar system from all directions. These "rays" con-sist largely of atomic nuclei trayeling at almost the speed of light. Attempts have been made to synthesize these substances in Soviet and American laboratories. Some scientists suspect nature may be doing the job somewhere out in space, producing fast-moving nuclei observable as cos-

The Apollo-16 detector consists of four panels mounted on one side of the lunar module that will carry Capt. John W. Young and Lt. Col. Charles M. Duke to the lunar surface.

Each panel consists of different combinations of materials in which cosmic rays leave a trace of their path. Three panels will be exposed from the time the Apollo spacecraft begins its long coast toward the moon. The fourth will be uncovered once the astronauts are on the moon. Before lift-off from the moon the panels will be bagged for return to earth and microscopic study. This should disclose the nature of the impacting particles. Ultraviolet Camera

The ultraviolet camera is to be set up on a tripod in the shadow of the lunar module. It will be aimed first at the earth to recorn the glow of the giant cloud of Each month, when the moon comes closest to the earth, there is an epidemic of small quakes that apparently originate deep inside the moon, possibly due to tidal effects of the earth's gravity.

Another surprise, from the last Apollo mission, was the measurement of heat flowing out from the lunar interior. This was done after the astronauts had drilled holes into the lunar surface and inserted instruments that provided temperature measurements deep in the hole and near the surface for transmission to earth.

The moon, at that location, was putting out about twice as much heat as expected, possibly because of radioactivity concentrated in rock near the surface. The Apollo-16 landing site has been chosen in part for its geologic interest. It seems to be covered with two types of lava flow. The astronauts will not only sample these, but will also try to visit nearby craters that could be of voicanic origin, using their motorized rover.

While they are on the surface a variety of measurements will be made by Comdr. Thomas K. Mattingly, plloting the command medule in a parking orbit around the moon. His program of observations and mapping photography is largely the same as on

To Counter Money

"Essentially, this is a way of countering the money raised by big individual contributors on the old side of the party," Mr. Beatty said. "What we're really talking about is money."

Saturday night's affair raised

The artists themseives stressed that the evening was a concert, not a rally, and the political hoopla was kept to a minimum. The only time Sen. McGovern's name was mentioned was when he appeared briefly on stage at the very end. The emphasis on music seemed

Call It Off

Hanol's offer to resume secret talks with the United States if the regular sessions in Faris begin again—and the bombing of North Vietnam is halted—is, on its face, a rather small quid for a fairly substantial quo. Washington has objected to reopening the Paris meetings unless there is some prospect of genuine negotiation and while the current major North Vietnamese offensive is under way. The bombing was haited once, to start the Paris discussion; there was no progress toward peace. Instead, Hanol sent its divisions over the line in a massive attack.

But the precise bargain to be struck now is not the point. Conceivably there might be some hope in discussions; there is very little in further fighting. And above all, the renewed bombing of the North is a mistake. To stop it for a consideration, however minimal, is some gain.

Strategic bombing is at best a bloody business, with dublous returns on the actual field of battle-unless, of course, the nuclear apocalypse is involved. That is ruled out by every consideration in the present conflict, in which prolonged conventional bombing was a generally recognized fallure. The cost of its resumption now is not worth any of the gains that apparently are hoped for, whether that cost is reckoned in bombers downed and ammunition expended, in Vletnamese lives lost, in American prestige eroded, in American domestic reaction. Hanol will not collapse under the bombing; if the Soviet Union is impressed, the impression may he good or bad, in American terms, but the risks involved in damaging prospects for a general arms accord far outweigh the profits that might accrue from a demonstration of American "determination."

As for the home front, American hostility to the conflict has progressed beyond the point where "cheap" victories—that is, those that might be achieved by strategic bombing-hold any charm. The American people do not helieve that victories can he obtained by splattering the North Vietnamese countryside with bodies and debris, and most nf them are convinced that If such victories could be won, they would be moral defeats.

The Hanoi offer thus has very little to do with the facts of the bombing, and the real reasons for stopping it now. But it does give a peg on which to hang a recognition of those facts. Tactical bombing can still be justifled by the arguments that the withdrawal of American troops must be safeguarded, that some kind of status quo must be maintained while new discussions take place. But the strategic bombing should he called off-at once.

The Third World

The quadrennial war of words between the rich and poor nations got under way last week at the opening of the UN Conference on Trade and Development in Santiago, Chile. As wearing as the next five weeks of oratory may prove to be, it would be a serious-and possibly fatai-error for the United States and the other members of the "rich man's club" to turn a deaf ear to what "Third World" leaders are saying,

They are warning that the gap between rich and poor is widening-and creating a politically explosive problem; they are putting the rich nations on notice that they will not tolerate a Western policy that involves careless exploitation of their resources or meddling in their internal political affairs. President Saivador Aliende of Chile, opening the UNCTAD conference, used his disputes with the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. and American copper companies to iliustrate what he called the "formidable danger" of multinational companies to the Third World.

The administration's foreign policy has been so dominated by Mr. Nixon's concept of the "five great powers"—the United States, the European Common Market, the Soviet Union. China and Japan—that it has tended to neglect the developing countries. But the representative of the People's Republic of China at the UNCTAD meeting in Santiago told other Third World leaders that from now on his nation would be "solidly" with them-though there is as yet no universal movement to flock behind the Chinese ban-

The United States and the other rich countries must soon decide, however, whetoer they wish to continue their policy of malignant neglect-which eventually seems gertain to drive the poor countries toward policies of cartelization and expropriation (like those followed by the oil-producing countries) or into the Communist camp. The alternative is for the industrialized nations to start a genuine effort to help Third World economic development.

Such an effort will invoive provision of more development aid through the World Bank and linking the International Monetary Fund's Issue of special drawing rights to the needs of the developing countries. It will also invoive reducing or eliminating tariffs, quotas and other trade barriers against the manufactured goods of the poor countries. And it will mean a willingness to give representatives of the developing countries a voice in world monetary and trade decisions affecting their interests.

By the same token, the poor countries . would do more to further their own development by seeking a better understanding of the problems-economic, monetary and social-of the rich, who have their own internal poverty, joblessness and inflation, The poor should aim at harmonizing their own goals with those of the industrialized nations and not waste excessive time and passion in recrimination. The route of expropriation and cutting of ties with capitalist nations has produced not an economic utopia, hut chaos in such countries as Cuha or Chile. And the socialist countries of Eastern Europe are not encouraging examples of how political freedom and economic deveiopment flower when nations fall under Communist rather than capitalist hegemony.

The UNCTAD meeting would provide a welcome surprise if it showed, for once, a real desire of rich and poor to work together instead of matching anger against

Moonward Bound

By this time most Americans are so blase ahout successful Apollo flights that it was left to a foreigner to pay adequate tribute to the smooth iaunch of Apollo-16 toward the moon. Yevgeny Yevtushenko, a Soviet guest at Cape Kennedy, said Apolio-16 ranked with the Grand Canyon as the most impressive sight he had eeen in this country. In this mood of admiration, Mr. Yevtushenko expressed the hope that American and Soviet astronauts will some day cross the Milky Way together in the same spirit in which their fathers met at the Elbe in 1945.

Implicit in Mr. Yevtushenko's tribute was the understanding that astronauts Young. Duke and Mattingly are moonward bound as envoys for all mankind. Their mission will he performed on a stage to which all nations have access. If they land on the moon, it will not be as imperialists to seize territory but as explorers seeking knowledge to he made available to all. Soviet scientists have already been given lunar material brought back by earlier Apollo flights. American scientiste have received lunar material obtained by Soviet unmanned probes.

The Apollo effort hegan in 1961 in an aura of cold war Soviet-American rivalry. But the Moscow television news gave the Apollo-16 launch equal time with events in Vletnam. Soviet-American space cooperation-perhaps a prelude to truly international teamwork-could help greatly in easing world tensions. It would be an unexpected but welcome by-product of the Apollo

Bombing North Vietnam

The problem comes down to one question: Does the renewal of air raids over North Vietnam run the risk of making the Vietnam conflict a more international one? Mr. Nixon's adversaries say 'yes.' The White House. after carefully studying the question, is betting "no." In reality, it is more a question of a diplomatic maneuver than a military

What Mr. Nixon wants is to warn North Vietnamese leaders that the nightmare of bombing that disappeared in 1968 cannot only begin again but can get worse. It is also a warning to Moscow. The question which everybody is asking is this: Can the Russians speak of peace with the Americans around a green conference table at the seme time heavy bombers are crushing their North Vietnamese allies?

Apparently, Mr. Nixon thinks so. His calculations have led him to bet that China will do nothing because it has not got the means and that Russia will not move because it wants above all-like the United Statesnot to make the May 22 meeting impossible. -From Le Figaro (Paris).

Bernard Levin From London:

'Merry' Battle Shaping Over Civil Liberties

a merry battle here soon on a field which has seen many such in its time, namely the law. A committee of jurists, which sits in an advisory capacity and from time to time suggests amendment to the law of the land-either general changes or changes in particular statutes has produced a report which has not yet been published, but has been (as is the way with such documents these days, on both sides of the Atlantic) extensively

And if the leaks give even a rough idea of what is in the re-port, and are also correct in saying that the government is likely to accept the recommendations and enact them, then those who wish Britain's civil liberties well. and who have a high regard for the safeguards against unjust or arbitrary treatment it incorporates into its law had better saddle their horses.

For the committee, it seems, is determined to sweep away pretty well every one of the legal safeguards which have long given defendants and suspects in Brit-ain protection that many coun-

Abolishing 'Caution'

First, they urge the abolition of the "caution"-that is, the requirement that an interrogating policeman who has decided to charge the suspect must tell him that he is not obliged to answer questions, but that anything he says will be written down and may be used

Coupled with this recommendation, the committee rejects the suggestion that such police interregutions should be recorded on tane, or that they should be done before a magistrate, or that the suspect shall eutomatically have the right to have a lawyer present; these suggestions, which have been repeatedly made by groups and individuals concerned at the number of cases in which defendants have denied in court proceedings that they made the statements attributed to them by the police, have been rejected as

But that is not all At present, a defendant in a criminal case in Britain cannot be compelled to give evidence or to undergo cross-examination. If he declines to go into the witness-box, neither the prosecution nor the judge is allowed to draw the jury's attention to the fact and to imply that the refusal is circumstantial evidence of guilt.

The committee's recommendstion is that this protection, too, should be abolished; thet a court should be able to insist that a defendant give evidence and be subjected to questioning, and that if he refuses, under the venerable and almost universal provision that a witness cannot be compelled to give answers which may tend to incriminate him, this refusal may be adduced as an additional reason for the jury to find him guilty.

That's Not All

And that is not all, either. Indeed, the worst is yet to come. For the committee has actually recommended the abolition of the rule which forbids a defendant's previous convictions to be alluded to in court until after the verdict. The grounds for this rule are so obvious, and so entirely incontrovertible, that I am almost embarrassed to repeat them; they are, of course, that a defendant should be tried on the evidence before the court that suggests he did the particular act alleged in the indiciment, and that anything he has previously done is not, and cannot be, evidence in that sense at all.

Now it will not do to conclude that a body of distinguished judges and lawyers have collecttively gone off their heads, and urged the destruction of some of the fundamental pillars of English law.

There must be a reason behind the committee's outrageous proposals, and it seems that there is: It is the old excuse, always trotted out when new powers for the police or the government are demanded and when safeguards for the liberties of the subject are to be swept away-the excuse that in the fight against organized crime, the authorities are handicapped by such provi-sions of the law, and that he who wills the end must also will the means.

This was the excuse given a few years ago when the ancient principle of English law, that a jury must give a unanimous verdict, was destroyed: There has been not the slightest diminution in the incidence of organized crime, but an increase in the number of cases in which a defendant has been found guilty by a majority verdict in circumstances which suggest that there may have been a misearriage of

Well if so, they have had to think again already. Opponents of the proposals are digging in, ready for official announcement and action, and one thing can be said now: There is going to be a arge-scale fight, before the thing is over I hope to report here from time to time on the progress of that fight.

U.S. and Russia Reopen Talks on War II Aid Debt

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP). -The United States and the Soviet Union this afternoon reopened the long-dormant question of Soviet debt for World War II lend-lease shipments.

Two sizable groups representing the two countries sat down in one of the State Department's conference rooms in a new attempt to bridge the difference between the U.S. request of $800 million and the last Russian offer of $300 million.

The Soviet Union proposed a new round of talks in February after a pause of 12 years. The Soviet delegation, headed by Vladimir Alkhlnov, Deputy Minister for Foreign Trade, arrived here Friday. Nobody knows quite when the trend atarted, but one of the earliest and certainly most spectacular and successful streetclosures which gave impetus to other cities was Copenhagen's famed Stroget, which becama "pedestrians only" 10 years ago. It was the first major city

Following the Danish exampla in the ensuing decade, traffic-free streets ara now to be found in such cities as Tokyo, The Hague and Verona.

U.S. Jails French Drug Smuggler for 5 Years

NEWARK NJ. April 17 (Reuters).-Former French secret agent Roger-Xavier Delouette was talled for five years here today for conspiring to import into the United States 96 pounds of heroin, worth $12 million, hidden inside a Volkswagen minibus.

The sentence, delivered by U.S. District Court Judge Frederick Lacer, was the minimum for the offense, which could bave carried a jail term of up to 20 years.

Delouette, 49, is a former employee of the French Secret Service, SDECE (Service de Documentation Exterieure et Contre-Espionnage).

The case caused a row between United States and French authorities when Delouette implicated his former counter-espionage boss, Col. Paul Fournier, who he said recruited him for tha drug-smuggling mission.

Col. Fournier was indicted here along with Delouette last Novemher. But he has rehemently denied any involvement in the case and has remained in France. At a brief court appearance last November Delouette pleaded guilty to conspiring to smuggle the heroin concealed in the bodywork of a minibus shipped to Port Elizabeth, N.J., aboard the French freighter Atlantic Cognac in April, 1971. The tall, distinguished-looking Delouette, dressed in light-colored slacks, a blue blazer and blue shirt, stood flanked by his lawyer and a woman interpreter to hear today's sentence. The judge noted that the year

Delouette has already spent in custody will be credited toward the sentence. Both Delouette's own lawyer and the U.S. prosecutor pleaded for leniency.

They both cited Delouette's close cooperation with U.S. authorities, almost from the moment he was arrested when he went to Port Elizabeth to pick up the vehicle containing the hidden drug. Delouette, who attributed his involvement in the smuggling plot to financial problems, told the court today, "I am neither a gangster nor a pusher." He said his family and his fiancée, Miss Marie Robert, had had their private lives "very disturbed" by French police behavior, "which I fear will continue '

Deloucite's lawyer. Donald Robinson, said he was "astounded. shocked and upset" at the failure of French authorities to proceed against Col. Fournier and others wbo might be involved in the heroin smuggling.
He said, "The French to date, instead of proceeding against Col. Fournier, are continuing to attempt to silence Delouette or punish bim in the worst way." He said Miss Roher, have been grilled by police on a variety of extraneous topics after she visited Delonette in the United States late last year. Her possport was revoked, and she was forbidden to leave Paris without permission, the lawyer said.

TOKYO, April 17 (WP),-A Foreign Ministry woman secretary who gave bim copies of at least three diplomatic cables involving relations with the United States were indicted Saturday on charges of violating a civil service secrecy law.

Until the formal indictment was handed down, the threatened prosecution of Mainlchi reporter Takichi Nishlyama and his news source, 41-year-old Mrs. Eikuko Hasumi, had been growing into a major challenge to press freedom. But the public attitude has changed abruptly following an allegation in the indictment that Mr. Nisbiyama obtained the documents as part of a pattern of "intimate relatious" with Mrs. Hasumi. Mainichi reportedly fired managing coltor Fujio Nakatani Saturday as the responsable executive at the time Mr. Nishivama obtained the cables and has suspended the reporter. The paper bas hitherto given its full back-ing to Mr. Nishiyama.

The language used in the in-dictment is delicate but pointed. Press accounts have underlined the fact that Mr. Nishiyama, 40, is married and that Mrs. Hasumi's 56-year-old husband has been bedridden with tuberculosis for the last 15 years.

Mainichi sald in a statement Japanese oewspaperman and a that there were "some aspects which were morally regrettable in Mr. Nishiyama's reporting activitles. But it reaffirmed its belief that the application of tha civil service secrecy law to a newspaper reporter is a violation of the "people's right to know."

The case has been a major political weapon against the government of Premier Eisaku Sato and led to disciplinary action against nine Foreign Ministry officials yesterday. The three cables given to Mr. Elshivama indicated timat Japan and the United States had reached a backstage understanding in contravention of a provision of the Okinawa reversion agreement. Under the agreement, the United States was committed to cover compensation costs for damage to Okinawan lands used as military bases. But the cables showed that Japan had promised to make the pay-

Mr. Nishiyama did not recort the existence of the cables in Mainichi directly but charged a "secret deal" had been made to the Okinawa compensation issue, Then he turned over the cables to a Socialist parliament member two weeks ago through a Mainicni intermediary, leading to their dramatic disclosure on the floor of the national legislature.

stalk into the saion like so many full, wide-et-the-top silhouette. The newest blousons have ribbed waistlines and dropped shoulders Business is booming and the and are often topped by short organizers are understandably capes.

The return to classicism means a lot of flannels and camel's hair. But there is also a color explogion due to the extensive use of Borg deep-pile fabrics. Borg fabrics were first introduced to couture designers three years ago by David Rothman, fashion consuitant for the firm. They were an instant success with Givenchy, Cardin, Venet and Ungaro, Now, the ready-to-wear designers have picked them up. They have turned the salon into an explosively brilliant scene with orange, red, green, Jellow and a blinding blue.

2 Million Meters

A spokesman for Borg said yesterday that last year they sold 200,000 meters to the industry. This year, they have spun out close to 2 million meters.

At the salon, Christian Aujard is rated as No. 1. A classic, highpriced house, he offers an excellent line of narrow belted coats with moderate dolman sleeves. His black lingerie dresses, with the bust caught into lace triangles, may be a trifle premature but they are soft and likable. Norbert Nel, a good, inexpensive sportswear house, had blousons combining rainbow Borg end waterproof linen and riding coats. Plerre Dostal, whose designer is Sara Panosetti, had soft angora jersey coat dresses, cut on the hiss and loosely belted. Her collection of ruffled blouses and evening blousons was also worth noting. André Ledoux really went to town with Borg and mixed several bright colors in his wild, ratchwork blousons.

In the sweater department, Jean Rychter mixed thorough tech-nique and good fashion sense. His little angora sweaters with lace ruffles were selling like hot cakes. But the biggest fashion story came out of Cardin, who got a sleeves, were close to the body standing ovation. During a dra-matic collection, he made two important points. First, he tore down the barrier between couture and ready-to-wear by mixing the two for the first time. The only wey to tell the difference was that the couture clothes came with numbers-but nobody really looked or cared. As Cardin said: "It's all one creation." Following an idea he has had for a long time, Cardin is now planning one collection a year which be will update with new models every couple of months.

Jean Rychter's short pullover in yellow wool

His second piece of news was 2 return to tightly belted, waspwaisted and very short dresses. Some even had stiff hips sticking Women are going to love it," said fashion consultant Mildred Custin, who was long president of Bonwit Teller.

Everything was short at Cardin, at least two inches above the knees, and everything was worn over ribbed body suits. Clothes arrived in neat, distinct groups: poncho costs with abstract designs, T-shaped jumper dresses, tightly belted tent costs with very full, bloused backs; bright hostess skirts with busy hemlines and finally the unmistakable Cardin dresses which unfolded into huge petals.

The crowd at Cardin's was incredible with hundreds of people stacked up precariously almost to the ceiling and dozens of cameramen scrambling all over each other. Even Twiggy, in town for the French premiere of "The Boy Friend," had a hard time getting eny attention.

Salute to Fath

Chloe today was another rewarding experience. Designer Karl Lagerfeld said six months ago that he would bring back the shape and would do a tongue-incheek salute to the late Jacques Fath. And so he did. His short little fackets with tightly fitted and an abrupt change from all those bulky, dolman sleeves. This was a very body-conscious collection with legs, backs, waists and bosoms all vying for atten-tion Lagerfeld made a definite bid for dresses with puffed sleeves, sleeves. He revived the gaudy tackiness of the '50s, with Hollywood dresses dreped in a soft bustle, exeggerated beels, gold belts, phony costume jewelry and pillboxes.

small waists and full, pleated

All that and the Americans joined the Prench fashion scene, too. Arnold Scassi, well-known in New York for his custommade evening dresses, did 20 cocktail and evening ready-towear dresses for Maria Moutet. All are terribly feminine and décolleté. His best seller is a black evening dress which is nothing but one big, beautiful ruffle with a white camelia stuck under the chin.

Music in Venice

A Little Bit of Everything For Verdians in 'Giovanna'

By William Weaver

TENICE (IHT).-Verdi's seventh opera, "Giovanna d'Arco," really warked the beginning of what he later called his "Galley Years" the intense period of creative activity when he wrote as many as five operas in two years. The operas of these years range from the stark, brooding "I Due Fosceri" to the intrespective, richly woven "Macheth," and they contain some of the composer's finest, most memorable music.

There is a great deal of fine music in "Giovanna d'Arco," as the revival which opened here last Friday at the Teatro la Fenice generously, convincingly proved. The protagonist-more familiarly known as Joan of Arc-has two full-fledged, touching arias and a melting death scene (not at the stake but, as in the Schiller play which inspired the libretto, after being wounded in battle). There is a long love duet between Joan and the king (as the douphin is called throughout the opera), and central to the piece-2 great scene between the heroine and her fether, suggesting later, similar scenes in "Luisa Miller" and "Rigoletto." For that matter, this "Giovanna" contains a bit of everything: supernatural charactic (again anticipating "Macbeth"), a triumphal grand march, a Te Deum and lots of martial music, Crammed as it is, the opera is still not dramatically convincing (though it is eminently enjoyable). The three characters—Joan, the king, and her father-are simply not very interesting or sympathetic This lack of sympathy may also account for the work's few revivals "Giovanna," when well performed, justifies production. And the Fenice performance had much to recommend it.

The taxing role of the saintly warrior (a kind of pendant to the bad warrior queen, Abigaille, in "Nabucco," was sung by 26-year-old Katia Ricciarelli. Winner of a recent contest sponsored by Italian TV, Miss Ricciarelli has received dinning publicity: interviews, a rapidly made recital record, and so on. Luckily, she has a real talent, and the foundation for a proper career. Perhaps she was not quite ready for this Giovanna; there was an occasional rough passage (notably the second act finale), but she showed command of the stage, musical and dramatic sense, in addition to her naturally beautiful voice. In the last act, she displayed true star quality. Carlo Franci's precise conducting gave her, and her colleagues, good support. Plaviano Labo and Mario Zanasi, as king and fether respectively, remained in the background, though both sang with taste. Pier

Luigi Samaritani created romantic, haunting sets, matched by the colorful elegance of Marcel Escoffier's costumes. The staging, by Alberto Fassini, rightly placed Giovanna in the center of every act; the other singers, the chorus furnished a kind of frame for the soprano. Visually, the evening was a feast; and for Verdians, this was a welcome occasion, an opportunity to hear an admittedly minor, but fascinating opera, in a carefully thoughtout, sensitively executed performance.

PARIS, April 17 (AP),-Charles de Gaulle's children, led by his son, Rear Adm. Philippe de Gaulle, filed a 100,000-franc dam-age suit Saturday that demand-ed the seizure of a book containing quotations from the late president's work

The family, backed by the Plon publishing house in suing jour-nalist André Passeron, said that it had the right to keep royalties on De Gaulle's work to itself.

Mr. Passeron, who is on the staff of Le Monde, has published a book on the president titled "De Geulle 1958-69," of which 85 of 320 pages contain quotes and extracts from De Gaulle's

Both the grilled lamb and beef were top quality. One of the meats in a sauce was outstanding—this was a rather spicy, stuffed pig's tail.

Among the vegetables, the purec maraichere—really almost a vegetable soup of potatoes, carrois, celery, turnips and watercress— was delicious as were the cold courgettes provençales, zucchini sauteed in olive oil with tomatoes and garlic.

publisher, has signed a contract acquiring world rights to three novels and one biographical work by Irving Wallace, the author of such popular fiction books as "The Prize" and "The Word" for sum reported to be close to $2.5 million

Marc Jaffe, Bantam's senior vice-president said yesterday that the contract was "one of the biggest and undoubtedly the most comprehensive" in publishing history.

He said it had taken "two to three weeks" to work out the agreement with Mr. Wallace's agent, Paul Gitlin, after Bantam had outbid other publishing

"I am no longer sure if the final figure is $100,000 above or below $2.5 million, but by the time we get through selling translation and serial rights the figure may well be close to $5 million," a source close to the negotiations

Mr. Wallace said he was "de-lighted with the deal." He called the $2.5 million figure "well in the ball park."

The wine was so big and powerful that it was almost a pity to drink it so young.

More SDRs Similar to Those in West

There were surprisingly few differences with orthodox financial_optnion in the West. Communist governments have little to say in what goes on because they did not join the monetary cinb of the last quarter century and are not being invited to the forum that will negotiate new rules. The Communists stood apart in the postwar era because for various reasons they were un-willing to accept the principles of multilateral free trade and currency convertibility that were the underpinning of the Bretton Woods system.

But as economic priorities slow-ly shift in these countries to meet consumer demands, so are the pressures rising for more trade with the West and some kind of accommodation with its monetary

Chemical Bank has opened a full-service branch in Tokyo

means And 50 60 We

Japan's recent economic growth is legendary. It's been matched by phenomenal trade growth between Japan, the U.S., Europe and the rest of the world.

Chemical Bank has been privileged to play a part in this tremendous growth. We've been working in Japan for over 20 years. For four of them, we've had a representative office in Tokyo.

Our experienced staff

Now, to complement our growing world-wide operation, Chemical Bank has opened a full-service branch in Tokyo. We have a full fledged team of Japanese and American bankers, headed by Olof Lindstedt, a man born in the Far East, educated in China and America, trained in U.S. methods of international banking, but with an understanding of some of the very special problems involved in doing business in the Orient.

Write him. Telex him. Call him. Better still, if you're in Japan, meet him. Bring your problem to him and his staff, either direct or through your Chemical Bank representative in Europe, and they'll give you the soundest banking advice in Asia.

No matter what your international banking needs are, Chemical Bank can help you meet them in Tokyo and around the world.

Merrill Lynch reports on its best year.

Three new records were set in

GROSS REVENUE reached $676 million - up 43 per cent from 1970.

NET PROFIT hit $70 million - up 72 per cent.

NET WORTH (assets minus liabilities) climbed to $393 million - up 40 per cent.

Those are the highlights of the 82nd annual report, just published.

It was a good start for Merrill Lynch's first year as a public company. (The first public stock offering was made on June 23, 1971.)

Some of the gains came from the general improvement in the economy and the stock market. But a lot of them came from management decisions made 3 years ago.

The move to diversity

In 1969 Merrill Lynch set out in a new direction – recognizing that the customer of the future would want to get more financial services from a single source. Here are some of the steps that were taken in the U.S.A. and through Merrill Lynch International:

...committed more resources to investment banking, both in the U.S.A. and internationally.

selling subsidiary (Lionel D. Edie & Co., Inc.) and a real estate financing subsidiary (Hubbard, Westervelt & Mottelay, Inc.).

investment counselling subsidiary Lionel D. Edie International Ltd.

serve the individual investor. Partly by offering mutual funds. And partly by improving the handling of corporate and municipal bonds in odd lots.

The results

In 1971; every ingredient in the new mixture showed a good gain over 1970.

Commission revenue went up by 57 per cent - to $361 million. But because of diversification, even that hefty figure came to little more than half of total revenue.

"Commission revenue" sounds like it might refer just to brokerage in listed securities. But a lot of it came from three other sources: brokerage in over-the-counter securities, commodity futures transactions, and mutual fund sales.

Another area of dramatic growth was investment banking, both in the U.S.A. and abroad. Income from underwritings was almost $63 million, up 33 per cent over 1970. At the same time, an industry record was set in corporate underwritings. Merrill Lynch managed or co-managed 220 corporate underwritings worth $10 billion.

The fastest growing part of the business is dealing in securities as a principal (rather than as a broker). Revenue from principal transactions in U.S. over-the-counter stocks, government, municipal and corporate bonds and in Eurodollar and other Euro Currency securities has grown almost 33 per cent a year for the last 10 years.

Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith International Ltd., is a wholly-owned affiliate of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. The international company operates branches and subsidiaries in 29 cities in 19 countries throughout the world, serving the international customers of its parent corporation. Through its subsidiaries, it is actively engaged in the world commodity markets and in underwriting and distributing international securities.

Keeping ahead of the times

Merrill Lynch has never thought that sheer size is a substitute for leadership. Here are some of the new things accomplished last year: * Sharply increased its business with institutions both in the United States and abroad.

* Set a company record by executing $2.2 billion worth of large blocks of stock.

* Offered international institutional customers a new block trading facility for European securities.

* Greatly expanded its Merrill Lynch International facilities for after-market trading of Eurodollar and other Euro Currency securities.

* Offered customers more diversity by moving into options (puts and calls).

* Devised and successfully marketed a new convertible Euro-security that allows U.S. Corporations to raise equity capital outside the U.S.

* Acted as managing underwriter for a new growth and income fund. Sold 90 per cent of the total offering.

* Established a commodity agency relationship in Singapore and became one of three major partners in an Australian Merchant Bank, PFCB Limited.

Things we won't change

Merrill Lynch is prepared to accept change and, in some cases, to cause it. But there are certain things that simply will not be changed.

Capital will always be managed conservatively. Every effort will be made to serve our customers well. Business will be conducted with all kinds of investors – including the smallest. We will always try to protect the in-

That's our credo. We think it will grow in importance now that we belong to the public we

In 1971 IU topped $1 billion in sales and increased earnings per share 37%.

In 1971 net income of International Utilities climbed to $50 million, or $3.28 a share. A record 37% gain coming on the heels of a record 33% increase in 1970.

IU's sales and revenues topped the $1.1 billion mark—an 11% increase over 1970. And our annual common dividend was raised to $1.40—the 27th consecutive year we've increased it.

Since we began moving into higher growth businesses in 1962, our earnings have increased at a compound rate of 15.3% a year. Our dividends have grown at a rate of 7.7% a year.

In 1971 all five of IU's operating groups reported improvement in both sales and earnings. Here are some of the ways we have been growing:

Land Transportation. We acquired Pacific Intermountain Express. Together with Ryder Truck Lines it forms a nationwide transportation system and makes IU the third largest motor carrier in the country.

Ocean Shipping. Revenues and earnings rose to record levels as our Gotaas-Larsen fleet of bulk carriers capitalized on the growing demand for energy around the world. We began expansion into liquefied natural gas tankers and off-shore oil drilling platforms.

Utilities. Gas and electric operations enjoyed above-average growth. To better serve Alberta's rapid expansion, we combined Canadian gas and electric operations into a single corporation, Canadian Utilities, Ltd. In the U.S., our subsidiary,

General Waterworks Corp., provides water services to 330,000 customers in 18 states.

Industrials. The Product Distribution group expanded geographically, improved distribution techniques and broadened product lines. The Energy & Process Industries group enlarged participation in the petrochemical area, and placed greater emphasis on the attractive fossil fuel and nuclear electric markets. The Metals & Minerals group increased pollution control services for iron and steel industries.

Agriculture and Land Development.
Our Hawaiian affiliate, C. Brewer and Co., Ltd., began construction of a $250-$300 million recreation and resort program as a supplement to its growing agricultural activities.

What does the future hold? John M. Seabrook, Chairman and President, sums it up this way: "Our objective continues to be to increase earnings per share 15% a year. And 1972 looks like another record year."

After the strong, artificial Precision one-club opening North responded negatively with one diamond and South rebld one no-trump, showing a balanced hand with 16-19 points. North made a transfer bid of two hearts, and South dutifully converted to two spades.

North's two no-trump and South's three no-trump were both on the agressive side. The result was a game contract with 23 high-card points. But the extra assets represented by South's five-card diamond suit and a sprinkling of intermediate cards were such that the game could not be defeated. West led a diamond and East'e and after World War II 2 strange people. They came during the war in devious ways from Lithuania, Russia, Hungary, Poland. After the war they came in droves from Auschwitz, Maidenek. Buchenwald. The men wear beards and side-locks, the women wigs. A somber, pious, industrious people on workdays, they dance and eing in their synagogues on the Sabbath. In their own eyes they are God's peculiarly chosen people, the Hasidic Jews.

In Chaim Potok'e first two novels, "The Chosen" (1967) and its sequel, "The Promise" (1969), the son of a spiritual leader (or Rebbe) of a Hasidic congregation makes the difficult decision to enter the world as a psychologist. Mr. Potok builds a strong and moving drama out of the tensions between the Hasidic and Orthodox Jews in Brooklyn yeshivoth, between fathers and sons, ancient and modern ideas of faith and ritual, and between Jews and the secular world.

"My Name Is Asher Lev" takes these themes and makes them into a novel of finely articulated power. The novelist is tragic always the conscience and chronicler of his race, and Mr. Potok can be envied by other novelists for his access to historical circumstances one would have thought exhausted—the transition from an old order to a new that was a constant theme of Victorian literature. Mr. Potok's bero must make a crossing from the 18th century to the 20th, and many times he makes it seem more like a leap from medieval thought to the age of Freud and Einstein.

Asher Lev is the son of Hasidim. His father, Aryen Lev, is part of the underground railroad that sneaks Jews out of Russia and founds synagogues in the ruins of Europe. He is a heroio figure, mysterious in his movements, pious, capable, dedicated. Asher's mother collapses under the strain of being the wife of a man exposed to constant danger ther brother is killed by Communist agents while on a mission for Aryeh Lev), and her story is one of deep suffering and courageous regeneration after a nervous breakdown. She studies. Russian and becomes part of the dangerous business herself.

Like all children, Asher drew. The Hasidim do not interpret the second commandment as a prohibition against the graphic arts (Marc Chagall was from a Hasidic family), yet they do not consider the artist a worthwhile member of society. Asher's art is a compulsion over which he has no control—he draws in his textbooks in class; he draws as easily as he breathes. His father to discourage him, his mother furtively encourages him.

THERE came to Brooklynduring When the problem is brought before the Rebbe, an artist who has been consulted (a nonobservant Jew with an international reputation as a sculptor) recognizes Ather's genius and agrees to take him as a pupil. The Rebbe formally decrees Asher's drawing as his gift from God.

At this point the novel can either fall into competent treatment of an interesting enough theme, or as it does move into a tragedy of terrifying dimen-sions. Mr. Potok realizes the full power of his story. Art may be acceptable to Hasidic orthodoxy, yet it is an art that belongs "to the other side." In a museum Asher learns for the first time of Christ. In life class he draws nudes. The one is not more bitter than the other to his father. who suffers anguish, outrage and disappointment.

Mr. Potok's first two novels remain in their Jewish world, with ominous echoes from outside (the Rosenbergs, Sen. McCarthy). In. "My Name Is Asher Lev" he brings the outside world into awful collision with the insular purity and integrity of Orthodoxy.

Kafka (who liked to draw) once remarked that the Jew prefers writing to drawing as he prefers motion to stillness. For every distinguished Jewish painter (a Modigliani, Chagall or Soutine). there must be a hundred distinguished Jewish writers. The surest evidence of Mr. Potok's skill as a writer is his obvious side-stepping of a novel about a novelist. Mr. Potok has a sure sense of how to diagram tragic misunderstanding. He knows that it must happen in a context of faith and love, and that it must be the exercise of faith and love that breaks hearts.

Mr. Potok's novels are deceptively plain. He uses rhetoric, no ostentation of style, neither of which he needs. One feels that his subject was inevitable and that he is writing with deepest and total understanding. As in all good fiction, Mr. Potok makes us believe that his stories are true, that they could only have been as he has told them. His voice is houst and guileless, but most of all it is compassionate. With "My is compassionate. With Mr. Name Is Asher Lev" Mr. Potok is clearly ending his apprenticeship as a novelist. Each novel has been a step toward mastery. He has now written a novel that is little short of a work of genius. and in his next novel we can hope that he will feel free to relinquish the careful restraint be exercises in his craftsmanship and create with the full force that is obviously at his command.

Hill Wins Gelf After Losing Lead of 7

PENSACOLA. Fla., April 17 (AP. Dave Hill, after losing a seven-stroke lead, rallied with a birdie on the final hole and won the $30,000 first prize yesterday in the Monsanto Open golf tournament by a stroke.

Hill, 34, had two couble bogevs en route to a par 71 on the final round and a 72-hole total of 271 on the Pensacola Country Club course. Jerry Heard, who won the Citrus Open earlier this season was seven strokes behind Hill before he challenged-only to score a bogcy on the last hole. He shot a 65 to finish second. Chris Blocker closed with a 63 and took third place at 274. Bob Goalby, who had a holein-one on the second hole, blazed home with a 65 over the 6.679yard course and finished fourth Hill had a five-stroke margin starting play on the final day. But he crifted back to the field with double bogeys on No. 4 and No. 11 and had to rally to salvage his ninth career tour victory. Heard, who reeled off four consecutive birdies starting from the 10th, went two strokes sheed of Hill when he hit the pin with his tee shot on the 16th, a par 3, and made an eight-foot putt for a birdle. But he went one over par on the 18th, hooking his drive into the woods. LEADING SCORERS compromise on the ITT hearings, which have become snarled over the question of whether Peter Flanigan and White other House aides can testify before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The problem seems to be a case of "execuprivilege."

Buchwald The White House has refused, up until now, to allow any of its staff to testify before a congressional committee on Capitol Hill.

The compromise would he for Flanigan and anyone else in the White House to be questioned on "neutral ground." away from Capitol Hill. This would save face for the executive branch and at the same time placate those senators who refuse to confirm Richard Kleindienst as attorney general as long as the White House will not allow Flanigan to testify.

The question is, what neutral ground would be satisfactory to all parties? Jack Anderson has offered to lend his offices on K Street to the committee, but for some reason the Republicans have turned him down.

Someone has suggested questioning Flanigan under the cherry blossoms by the Tidal Basin. But the Park Department has refused a permit on the ground that the hot air produced by the hearings could hurt the flowers. Another idea was to hold the

Old Bern Is Closed To Traffic in Test

BERN, April 17 (Reuters) .-- A large part of the historic center of Bern was closed to truffic today in a six-month experiment. The old part of the Swiss capltal consists of arcaded 14thcentury and 15th-century streets with fountains in their centers, flanked by three hig clock towers, the cathedral and the hear pit.

held them in a car-rental agency that is only No. 2 in the business. The one neutral ground that is being given careful consideration Is the RFK Stadium. Since the Washington Senators baseball team left town, the stadium is empty until the fall, when the hearings could possibly be over. The consensus here is that without baseball in Washington. the public might go hig for a congressional investigation.

The stadium seats 60,000 persons and would probably be sold out for a sporting event of this

The witness stand would be at home plate, and the committee could sit around the infield. Questions would be pitched from the mound. Many persons think the fans would pay as much as $10 a seat to hear Flanigan's version of how he became involved in the ITT business.

To placate the Republicans, who might feel the Democrats wanted to turn the hearings into a circus, it has been suggested that all receipts from the event be donated to the Republican National Committee to finance their convention in San Diego.

The promoters of RFK Stadium have added something to assure a big crowd. They would permit the fans to participate in the hearings. If they helieved Flanigan answered a question truthfully, they would raise their thumbs up. If they felt he was Julien Green, trim and distinguished in appearance, was born in Paris in 1900 but doesn't look it. Last June he was elected to the Académie Française, an unprecedented accolade for an American.

American in the French Academy

DARIS (IHT),—The book-filled room was quiet. Leafy treetops could be seen through the open window, and the voices of children at play four stories below, drifted up faintly. It was twilight, long past the usual closing hour of French

"Oh," said Julien Green, "that's the back yard of the Soviet Embassy down there. The children are very well-behaved," he added with a smile. "They're no problem. I like to hear them."

The French-born American novelist has, in fact, no problem with any of his neighbors. The Hôtel de Matignon, across the street, is the official residence of the prime minister, Jacques Chaban-Delmas, and he's no problem. Up the street, in the other direction, is the Italian Embassy, which is no problem either.

The problem for Mr. Green, and for the other residents of 52 bis Rue de Varenne, is with the landlord, who has been trying since 1969 to evict them all and tear down the building. Why anyone would want to destroy such a beautiful structure, which dates from about 1348, is hard to imagine—except for the obvious mo-tive of replacing it with something more profitable.

There is a low facade, with the usual double doors, fronting on the street. You press the buzzer to open the door and then pass the subbyhole of a smiling con-clerge. Across a wide courtyard is tha building proper, with a marble staircasa and a striking wrought-iron balustrade. Mr. Green lives on the top floor.

Place to Work

"It's an ideal place to work." he said. "My intention is to stay here as long as possible."

Mr. Green and his sister, who have lived there since 1947, and the other residents of 52 Rue de Varenne, have a powerful ally in their struggle. Frederic du Pont, a former government minister, is leading a campaign to preserve as much as possible of that arrondissement, the seventh, which includes some of the handsomest huildings in Paris. Another defensive factor is a law passed in 1968 (a year before the eviction effort started) that protects a tenant from being shoved out until he has found another dwelling of equal size and status. This, on the face of it would be very difficult. .

Mr. Green, trim and distinguished in appearance, was born in Paris in 1900 but doesn't look it. Most of his 30 books were written here. Last June he was elected to the Académie Française, an unprecedented accolade for an American. It took some top-level string-pulling, as a result of which he became, in effect, an honorary

Urbane Man

An urbane man, relaxed in conversation, he told of his education, at a French lycée and then at the University of Virginia, where he majored in language studies and made Phi Beta Kappa. He returned to France and remained "until late in December, '39, or early in 1940." after the outbreak of World War IL Back in the States, he became a sergeant in the Army, working as a language specialist. Discharged at 42 as overage, he went to work for the Office of War Information, doing a daily shortwave hroadcast designed to help sustain the morale of the French. He returned to liberated Paris in 1945 and, after a two-year quest, found his present haven in the Rue de Varenne.

Asked about his election to the .:cadémie Française twhose membership is limited to 40) he said that his uniform is all ready for the induction ceremony, which will probably be held in October. It's mainly black, with green and gold embroidery. "And a black cape and a sword for the most formal occasions," he added, smiling. Except for an autobiographical work about his early youth, called "Happy Days" and published in 1942, he has written all of his books in French. He has not done the English translations himself-"I'd rather use the time to write another novel in French," he explained. His latest book, "L'Autre," is due for publication in September. An English version will be issued by Harcourt, Brace.

He also disclosed that his collected works are being published by Gallimard in its Pleiade series—a distinction he shares with Malraux and Montherlant. The first of five volumes is due to appear later this month.

American Honor

He has not returned to the United States since 1945, mainly because he has no close personal ties there. But he mentioned, not without pride, that he has also been elected to the American Academy

He writes every day from 10 to 12 or p.m., and has the air of a man who expects to keep on doing it almost indefinitely: The ninth volume based on his diaries is slated for publication soon. Clearly he and his sister are the kind of tenants who are hard to dislodge, except perhaps with a bulldozer.
